Description I think it might be cleaner to put all packages related to Iceweasel in one group, although I'm not entirely sure.

the iceweasel-addons package group is meant to be the replacement for the arch firefox-addons package group - iceweasel-hardened-preferences is not an add-on though - it is not in the main repos; so it would be visible as a group member only if [nonprism] is enabled package groups are not about tidiness - they are only a minor convenience; so that a heap of packages can be installed at once - package groups are not very important
