Current blockers for this are:

1) The game "data" itself is free (CC0), but that isn't the complete game, just the assets and configuration for the game engine. The game engine "Torque3D" is "open source" but has many libraries bundled in it which appear to be non-free e.g...

2) It is incompatible with GCC 6 and won't build properly. I tried patching several things to see if I could get it to build, but it will be awhile before they update their code enough to make this build on any recent version.

- For sake of completion here is the PKGBUILD with hacks I have applied to make it "almost build", it manages to get to almost 50% of the build process before failing due to an error in libwayland. I presume this will be fixed upstream at some point.

FYI, here's the upstream patch which hasn't come down yet: <http://patches.openembedded.org/patch/123889/>

Error is:

CMakeFiles/SDL2.dir/src/video/wayland/SDL_waylandvideo.c.o:/usr/include/wayland-client-protocol.h:1061: more undefined references to `wl_proxy_marshal_constructor_versioned' follow

- Priority changed from wish to freedom issue

- Status changed from open to not-a-bug

Since usstream depends on non-free licensed code to compile I am closing this ticket. :/
